

Note on Contributors (in order of appearance)

Cecile Sandten is Professor of English Literatures at Chemnitz University of Technology, Germany. She is the author of a monograph about the Indian poet Sujata Bhatt (1998) and Shakespeare's Globe, Global Shakespeares (2015). She has published widely on Indian English poetry, the representation of the (postcolonial) metropolis, conceptualisations of 'home', detective fiction, or asylum account and refugees.

Ariktam Chatterjee is an Assistant Professor of English at the Government General Degree College, Singur, Hooghly. He has done his Ph.D. from the Centre for Studies in Social Sciences, Calcutta, on the History of Bible Translation in Bengali. Translation, cultural studies, semiotics and Renaissance Studies are his areas of interest.

Arzoo Saha is pursuing her Ph.D. thesis on the 'Origin and Nature of Indian Rap' under the supervision of Prof. Meenakshi Malhotra from the University of Delhi. She teaches English at Ramanujan College in Delhi. Her academic interests are Popular Culture, Postcolonial theory and Literature and Modernism.

Gorica Majstorovic is Professor of Spanish and Coordinator of Latin American and Caribbean Studies at Stockton University. She is currently completing a book manuscript on the interwar Latin American literature and the Global South and co-editing, with Axel Gasquet, a collected volume on literary interactions between Latin America and Asia.

Paul Veyret is Senior Lecturer at Bordeaux Montaigne University. He is the co-editor of Desi, a pluridisciplinary journal on aspects of the South Asian diaspora. He has published on contemporary British, Pakistani, and Indian fiction, and Pakistani and Indian cinema.

Samar H. Aljahdali is an Assistant Professor in the Department of English at the University of Jeddah (Saudi Arabia). She received her PhD from Exeter University (2014). Her research interests include postcolonial theory and literature and cultural studies.

Catherine Brown-Robison is a graduate of Marquette University, having received her master's degree in English Literature in 2019, preceding her bachelor's degree in English Literature from the University of Wisconsin-Parkside. Her primary area of focus is in postcolonial literatures, specifically those that engage with and pertain to authorial hybridity.

Lava Asaad is a Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow at Auburn University. She received her doctoral degree from Middle Tennessee State University. She is the author of Literature with a White Helmet: The Textual-Corporeality of Being, Becoming and Representing Refugees (Routledge).

Peter E. Omoko is a playwright/scholar who teaches African oral literature, creative writing, African and European literatures at the Department of English, Delta State College of Education, Mosogar Delta State-Nigeria and whose research interest focuses on translation, fieldwork/folklore studies, popular songs and African drama. He has published in a wide range of scholarly journals and books.

Paul Antonopoulos is the Director of the Center for Research on Multipolarity and a Research Fellow at the Center for Syncretic. His main research interests are the international relations and political economy of the Middle East and Latin America, as well as multipolarity and anti-imperialism.

Daniel França Ribeiro is doing a Postgraduate Degree in Public Law at Unyleya in Brazil. He is a graduate of Law at Centro Universitário de Brasília and Political Science at the Universidade de Brasília. His main research interests are the international relations and political economy of BRICS and multipolar geopolitics.

Drew Cottle is senior lecturer in History and Politics at Western Sydney University. His research interests include revolutionary and post-colonial struggles, and multipolarity.

Dhrubajyoti Banerjee teaches English at New Alipore College, Kolkata. An alumnus of Presidency College, he went on to complete his Masters, M.Phil. and Doctoral Research from Jadavpur University. His areas of interest and research include Indian Writing in English, Travel Writing, Translation, Literary Theory, Literature and Films etc. He lives in Kolkata.